Quartet of Thunderbolt Fighters Tackles 32 Jap Planes and Downs Eight

Stirring Action of Eight to One Odds Features MacArthur's Communique, Which Also Reports New Allied Air Blows in Solomons; 400 Japs Are Killed by Allied Troops

By C. YATES McDaniel

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Wednesday, Oct. 13 (AP)—The latest addition to General MacArthur's aerial armory, the Thunderbolt fighter, took the spotlight over the weekend when four of them tackled thirty-two Japanese fighters over New Guinea, downing eight and possibly more.

This stirring action of eight to one odds was the feature of today's communique which also reported new Allied air blows in the Solomons, a stir of Japanese air activity, and the killing of more than 400 Japanese by Australians in mopping up operations to the northwest of captured Finschhafen, New Guinea.

In related reports on the fighting at Finschhafen, headquarters said the Japanese were slain in a series of counterattacks. Meanwhile, Australians in the Ramu valley who are moving north with approximately forty miles of the enemy coastal base of Madang are expanding their holdings by driving Japanese from outpost positions in high ground.

The Japanese air force also was on the offensive in both the Southwest and South Pacific. It made three raids against Lae, New Guinea, which were characterized as ineffective. In the Solomons, Japanese torpedo planes caused shipping damage in a raid on Guadalcanal. Off Dutch New Guinea, Allied Liberators sank a small enemy tanker.

A spokesman also said one out of six ship convoys off Buna in the Northern Solomons had been damaged by air bombardment.

The thirty-two fighters engaged in the New Guinea sector were intercepted while escorting twelve bombers. No mention was made of losses by the Allied fighters patrol.

In the Solomons, where the Japanese have pulled out of the central group of islands, American fighter planes attacked installations, started fires and silenced gun positions in the area of Southern Bougainville. That is the last big base still held by the Japanese in the Solomons.

On nearby Choiseul island, from which some of the evacuated troops are awaiting transfer to Bougainville, American medium bombers and escorting fighters attacked large concentrations used for such transfers.

Northwest of Australia, Allied medium bombers spread fires along the main wharf at Ambon on Amboina island.

Federal Subsidy For Education Is Attacked

BALTIMORE, Oct. 12 (AP)—Harry S. Middendorf of the Maryland Public Expenditure Council asserted today that the $300,000,000 proposed federal subsidy for education is being vigorously opposed by organized taxpayers in the state and declared it a "labor subsidy."

Middendorf, who said he had completed a canvass of tax payers and civic leaders throughout the state, asserted in a prepared statement that "this bill (S-637) is an attempt to wedge to pry control of our schools from the states and local communities and place the control in the hands of another federal bureau."

The bill is not primarily a subsidy to education at all, but is actually a labor subsidy, since from ninety to ninety-five per cent of the $300,000,000 would most probably go to teachers' salaries. Taxpayers of Maryland are not content to measure the quality of education by the amount of teachers' salaries alone.

Under the bill, local economy in school administration is penalized. No state would receive any subsidy if it reduced either its total or per pupil school expenditures below that of 1942.

Commenting on the state's rights issue, Middendorf went on to say that "while this subsidy bill states that no federal official may exercise any control over any local schools, it does require education progress reports to be made to Washington, which is the first logical step in control."

But the bill does actually start control of local school boards since it specifically directs that the first $100,000,000 be paid to school teachers. This, regardless of whether

U. S. Will Use Azores Bases In Emergency

President Reveals Japan Losing 130,000 Tons of Shipping a Month

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that the United States and other United Nations would in emergency cases use the Azores bases Portugal has granted to Britain.

He disclosed that the decision to seek the Portuguese government's agreement to use of the bases was reached at the conferences he and Prime Minister Winston Churchill held here in May.

In other volunteered statements on the war, Mr. Roosevelt told his press-radio conference:

1. Japan has lost an average of 130,000 tons of shipping a month for the last six months with American submarines taking the heaviest toll. This is believed, he said, to be considerably larger than the enemy's replacements.

Air Raid Statistics

2. The American people, when thinking about gasoline rationing and what they have accomplished in production, should consider the statistics of American air raids on German objectives last Friday. He said 855 planes participated carrying 2,500,000 pounds of bombs, 2,750,000 pounds of ammunition, and 800 pounds of maps. They flew 850,000 miles, traveled 1,400 miles on the ground in taking off, landing and taxiing, burned nearly a million gallons of gasoline and 25,000 gallons of oil. Each plane was over enemy territory from two to six hours. Five thousand crewmen participated.

3. He wanted to pass on a suggestion which had come from a newspaperman on the other side of the ocean that it would be helpful to the morale of the French (Continued on Page 13, Col. 5)

Secretary Ickes Turns All Coal Mines Back to Their Owners

By MAX HALL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—The government took itself out of the coal mining business today as Interior Secretary Ickes turned back to their owners the 1,700 mines still in government possession and announced liquidation of the coal mines administration, which he headed.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, declined to comment, and apparently the next move in the muddled coal labor situation is up to the National Labor Board, which must decide whether to approve two contracts agreed upon by the UMW and private operators. The agreements do not cover the general soft coal industry, but union leaders and some operators have expected them to furnish a pattern for broader agreements.

Floods Delaying Volturno Battle; Corfu Is Bombed

Heavy Equipment of Clark's Fifth Army Mired at Some Points

By EDWARD KENNEDY

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Algiers, Oct. 12 (AP)—Fifth army observation details high in Italian hills are mapping German dispositions in the valley across the flooded Volturno for the hour when Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark orders the big push toward Rome, a field dispatch said tonight.

Clearing skies permitted Allied bombers to blast Nazi positions all along the front and British gained ground on the Adriatic end of the line despite better German resistance.

(Hinting that the Fifth army offensive was imminent, a British correspondent quoted General Clark as saying after an inspection of the front Tuesday that "there is no place in the world as quiet as a battlefield before the battle.")

Americans Advance

"Radio France in Algiers said in a broadcast recorded in London that American forces had advanced more than fourteen miles in the last twenty-four hours. The site of this reported gain and the nature of the action were not stated, but the station added that the Fifth army was beginning to turn the flank of the Nazis' front 'north of Benevento,' which would be in the Calore river sector."

Mud still handicapped the movement of the Fifth's heavy equipment as a result of several days of rain. The observation posts are working day and night to collect data for the offensive.

An Allied communique said only patrol activities and artillery duels had enlivened the rain-bogged front across Italy in the past twenty-four hours. The Nazis grasped the respite to strengthen their defenses in depth along the northern bank of the Volturno, which Clark's forces must penetrate in their drive toward Rome.

Eighth Army Makes Gains

Despite the adverse weather the British Eighth Army was reported to have gained ground at some points on the Adriatic end of the line. German resistance in this area was described as increasingly stiff, however, and west of Tremoli British patrols ran into enemy tanks.

(A Berlin broadcast said German forces along the Calore river at the center of the Italian line had retreated to new positions in the mountains near Cerreto. Cerreto is eight miles west of Pontelandolfo, whose capture the Allies announced yesterday.)

In the day's most telling aerial assault, American Mitchell medium bombers escorted by Lightning fighters rained bombs on a Nazi airfield on Corfu, strategic Greek island dominating the entrance to the Adriatic. In addition to raking the Garitza airfield, the Mitchells scored two direct hits on a merchant ship in Corfu harbor.

In Italy Allied fighter-bombers smashed at Nazi gun positions the length of the front and destroyed motor transport and trains that are straining to keep the enemy's fighting forces supplied with food and ammunition.

Fighters patrolled the skies over the sudden battlefield throughout the day, looking for trouble, but the Germans did not send up a single plane to meet them. Not a ship was lost to the Allies in all the day's operations.

Air War Continuing

For the seventh straight day, the air war was carried to the Nazis in the Aegean sea and in the islands off Greece. United States heavy bombers poured bombs on the Kakato airfield in Rhodes, while bomb-carrying Lightnings attacked the Antimachia airport on the island of Crete.

Gloomy Picture For Motorists Painted by OWI

Further Sharp Curtailment of Civilian Driving Forecast

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—Further sharp curtailment of civilian driving was forecast today in an Office of War Information survey pointing up the mounting demand for gasoline for swiftly expanding military operations.

Not only will there be less gasoline, but its quality will become progressively poorer, OWI predicted. The report estimated that quantities available to civilians now are running 500,000 barrels short of the daily pre-war consumption. It added bluntly that the shortage "will intensify for the duration."

The gloomy survey of civilian supply prospects was made public just after the Petroleum Administration for War announced reorganization of its foreign operations division in a manner indicating that greater use would be made of oil sources abroad.

In general, the directives from Secretary Ickes, petroleum administrator for war, empower the Foreign Operations committee to order wider use of American-owned fields abroad; to utilize transportation, storage, processing and distribution facilities without regard to ownership; in order to avoid lost motion in getting oil from the nearest source to the point of war consumption; and to arrange purchases, sales exchanges and loans of oil products.

Move To Prevent Duplication

Officials at the PAW said the Foreign Operations committee could survey all our operations in the foreign field to prevent duplication of effort. This could well take the form, for example, of negotiating for the use of British facilities in areas closer to districts to be supplied than United States export points.

The trend of demand as the United Nations move to the offensive is reflected in these OWI survey figures:

In 1942, 12.5 per cent of all gasoline produced in the East, mid-west and southeast went to the armed forces and lend-lease.

Requirements for next year and 1945 are estimated at more than three times this amount.

Daily production of all types of gasoline at present is about 1,800,000 barrels, with one-third channeled to the armed forces and lend-lease.

Tanks of one armored division will consume about 25,000 gallons in traveling 100 miles while 1,000 flying fortresses on a single six-hour mission will burn at least 1,500,000 gallons of high-octane fuel.

Walsh Contends Governor Has Power To Revoke Conditional Pardon

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 12 (AP)—Attorney General William C. Walsh contended today that the state law permitting the governor to revoke a conditional pardon without holding a hearing was constitutional.

The appeal by the state came as result of a decision by Judge Ogle Marbury, chief judge of the Seventh Judicial court, in the case of Donald J. Herzog whose conditional pardon had been revoked.

Judge Marbury stated in his opinion that the law was unconstitutional and void "inasmuch as it is contrary to the Declaration of Rights of Maryland and to the Fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States."

Both the Declaration of Rights and the Fourteenth amendment provide that no person shall be deprived "of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

James J. Laughlin, of Washington, Herzog's attorney, said that the due process of law, "when applied to court procedure, requires both notice and right to be heard."

Maryland's Declaration of Rights, he said, provides that "the trial of facts, where they arise, is one of the greatest securities of the lives, liberties and estate of the people."

Herzog was sentenced in March, 1934, by the Criminal Court of Baltimore City to ten years in the WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—A federal retail sales tax, coupled with rigid economy in government expenditures, was urged upon Congress today by the United States Chamber of Commerce, as a substitute for the administration's badly pummeled $10,500,000,000 new revenue program.

Chairman Doughton (D-NC) of the House Ways and Means committee, interrupted presentation of the chamber's tax suggestions to say "I've never been able to reconcile the treasury's argument that increased income taxes would retard inflation, while a sales tax would increase inflation."

Doughton took no definite position on the issue, but said he wanted more information. In the past he has led fights against sales taxes.

Opposition Is Increasing

The sales levy, however, appeared to have run into a rising tide of opposition in the committee. There were no predictions that Congress would pass such a tax.

Ellsworth C. Alvord, chairman of the chamber's committee on federal finance, opposed further increases in income taxes—either for corporations or individuals—as proposed by the administration.

He declared the treasury department's multi-billion revenue plan is "supported solely by political expediency."

Although recommending no precise level for the sales tax, Alvord told the committee, a ten per cent tax without any exemptions, probably would yield over $6,000,000,000 and a five per cent levy about $3,500,000,000.

The witness said it was the chamber's belief that a sales tax:

1. Is desirably deflationary, and would help stamp out black markets.

2. Would collect substantial revenues, without imposing unbearable burdens, from those receiving four-fifths of the national income.

3. When viewed merely as a part of the tax system, would not impose burdens which discriminate in favor of low-income groups and against high-income groups.

4. Would render unnecessary the tremendous increases in certain excise taxes advocated by the treasury.

5. Would be a highly desirable supplement, at least for the duration of the war, to the present tax laws.

Could Cut Expenditures

Fred R. Fairchild, professor of political economy, Yale university and a member of the chamber's Federal Finance committee, told the tax-drafting body "it is safe to say that something like $5,000,000,000 could be subtracted from the annual expenditures of the federal government without impairing any essential service—indeed possibly to the improvement of the public service."

"The elimination of unnecessary government expenditures offers the most direct and effective of all possible attacks upon inflation," he said.

Reps. Forand (D-R) and Lynch (D-N Y.) brought out that a sales tax would cut into old age pensions, allowances for soldiers' dependents and veterans' benefits.

penitentiary on each of four charges of robbery with a deadly weapon and he was given a one year sentence at the same time on a larceny charge.

In June, 1937, he was paroled by former Governor Harry W. Nice. Governor O'Connor, in January, 1942, revoked the conditional pardon on the grounds that Herzog had violated its conditions.

"No formal hearing by the governor is required as a necessary prerequisite to the revocation of a conditional pardon," the attorney general told the court.

"The governor is required only to determine as a fact, on evidence or data before him," he continued, "that there has been a violation by the pardoned prisoner of the terms of his pardon."

Walsh also stated that the state was clearly constitutional "because it merely confines to the governor the executive function of pardon, and denies only the privilege of court review of the correctness of the governor's determination of the facts."

Herzog was charged last December on two indictments of forgery on which he entered pleas of guilty. He was sentenced to three months by the Baltimore City Criminal Court but it was ordered that the sentences run concurrently with the sentences already imposed in the robbery cases.

Roosevelt Takes Issue with War Front Criticisms

Complaints Regarding Oil and Truck Shipments Are Checked

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt, taking issue with critical statements made at secret Senate sessions, declared today that maybe Russia isn't ready to go to war with Japan because she has something more important to do. She has knocked the Germans down three or four times, the president said, and maybe if she knocks them down three or four more times, they will stay down.

That was the president's reply to an estimate, attributed to Senator Lodge (R-Mass.), that a million American lives could be saved by use of Siberian bases in the war against Japan. Lodge and four other senators recently completed a world tour of battlefronts and then addressed the Senate in closed sessions. A number of senators later informed reporters of what was said at the sessions.

Says Brewster Misinformed

In a lengthy discussion at his news conference, the president said that the net result if the Soviet granted the United States use of Siberian bases at this time might be that the Japanese simply would move in and take them over. Russia, he observed, would be weakened at a time when she may be getting set to knock the Germans out.

The president also described as founded on error the criticism by another globe-girdling senator of shipments of civilian trucks to Australia. This legislator, Senator Brewster (R-Maine), was quoted as saying that 30,000 civilian trucks were sent to Australia in a year by lend lease while 15,000 were allotted to American business men. Mr. Roosevelt said that was all wrong.

Actually, he said, 21,135 trucks were sent to Australia over two and one-half years while 750,000 were distributed here. The trucks sent to Australia were civilian in name only, he added, saying over half were commandeered by the Australian government for direct military purposes. Trucks were especially needed in Australia, he continued.

While the president was thus taking issue with some of the senatorial complaints, lend-lease continued under fire in the Senate with Senator Ellender (D-La.) demanding an immediate investigation of the agency's operations.

Ellender did not mention acquisition of Russian air bases but proposed that President Roosevelt undertake negotiations now with Allied nations generally on war aid settlements.

Ellender Wants Investigation

"Let's bargain now, while the war is on, without waiting for the question of repayment to complicate peace negotiations," Ellender said. "I don't think we can expect full repayment from China, or from Russia at this time, but Great Britain at least should be called upon to help us replenish some of the natural resources we have been depleting to help her."

The Louisiana Democrat said that if the Senate Appropriations committee or the Truman War Investigating committee failed to undertake such an inquiry he would introduce a resolution calling for a special Senate investigation.

Ellender was not one of the senators to visit the battlefronts. They were Senators Mead (D-NY), Chandler (D-Ky), Russell (D-Ga.), Brewster and Lodge.

After the president discussed the Russian and other questions, he told his press conference he was of two minds about public airing of such matters. He questioned the advisability of utterances which might lead to international bitterness, but he said it was democracy at work.

Yugoslav Partisan Forces Holding Firmly on Dalmatian Coast

By A. I. GOLDBERG

LONDON, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Berlin radio, despite continued Allied aerial attacks in the Eastern Mediterranean and the operations of Yugoslav guerrillas, said tonight that the Allies now had abandoned a plan to land in the Balkans this year.

Berlin conceded that at the time of the Italian armistice on Sept. 8 the Dalmatian coast ports were in the hands of troops loyal to Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio or anti-Axis partisans. The broadcast described that period as the "most favorable moment" offered British and American forces for a land operation in the Balkans and added that an operation "seems to have been definitely abandoned in view of the approaching winter."

Nazi Claims Contradicted

Direct contradiction of the German claim that Nazi forces had weathered the worst of the storm in Yugoslavia was contained today in a communique of the Yugoslav Liberation Army which announced that partisan forces "firmly held" the Dalmatian coast south of Split. This would place these forces in

Bases Will Be Available Immediately; Agreement Announced by Churchill

Will Give Allies Valuable Aid in Battle against German Submarine Menace in the Atlantic; Portugal Will Remain Neutral on Mainland; Allied Vessels Are Now Patrolling off Azores

By E. C. DANIEL

LONDON, Oct. 12 (AP)—Portugal, in an agreement announced by Prime Minister Churchill in the House of Commons, today granted British naval and air anti-submarine bases in the Azores, strategic Atlantic crossroads commanding all routes from the United States to Europe and the Mediterranean.

The new bases, made available to Britain immediately, will give the Allies valuable aid in the battle against the German submarine menace, expected to rise sharply again as the Allies prepare to invade the continent. The Azores lie 1,643 air miles southwest of London, 1,037 miles west of Lisbon and 1,495 miles southwest of the big Atlantic air base of Botwood, Newfoundland.

British forces will be withdrawn from the Azores at the end of the war, Churchill said. Britain for her part is to assist "in furnishing essential material and supplies for the Portuguese armed forces and for the maintenance of Portugal's national economy."

Churchill told Commons that the new facilities "will enable better protection to be provided for merchant shipping in the Atlantic" and "will prove an important factor in shortening the war."

Will Continue Neutrality Policy

Although the agreement was announced amid rumors that Portugal, Britain's oldest ally, was about to take an active role in the war, Churchill made it clear that the Portuguese government—in full agreement with Britain—desired to "continue their policy of neutrality on the European mainland and thus to maintain a zone of peace in the Iberian peninsula."

Premier Antonio De Salazar of Portugal emphasized the same point in a press conference at Lisbon, saying nothing in the agreement affected Portuguese determination to maintain neutrality on the European mainland.

It was considered likely here that the Germans would refrain from hostility toward tiny Portugal which has an army of only 150,000 and a negligible air force, in order to keep up their valuable diplomatic and spy activity in Lisbon.

The foreign minister of Spain, which has a pact of friendship and non-aggression with her Iberian neighbor, issued a note saying the Spanish policy of vigilant neutrality would be maintained.

Hope was raised immediately in London today that Elre, Turkey and other neutrals might take Portugal's action as a precedent and extend military facilities to the Allies. Turkey is allied with Britain under much the same sort of a treaty as the 570-year-old British-Portuguese agreement under which today's action was taken.

The new agreement has been under negotiation for several weeks, and a Bern dispatch early today, hours before the agreement was announced, said Allied vessels already were patrolling off the Azores.

It will be homecoming for any (Continued on Page 13, Col. 6)

Italian-American Unity Is Cited By Gov. O'Connor

BALTIMORE, Oct. 12 (AP)—Unity of Italian and American war aims was cited today by Governor O'Connor in a Columbus day address that featured Maryland's observance of the anniversary of the Italian navigator's discovery of the new world.

The day was a holiday only for banks, state and city offices and courts, as business establishments and war plants adhered to work-day schedules.

Speaking at a public ceremony on the War Memorial plaza, the governor asked for rededication by the home front to support of the nation's armed forces, some of whom were "fighting valiantly on Italian soil, not as enemies, but as welcomed liberators."

"Let us send word x x x to America's fighting forces x x x that, as Italy and America once were fighting together in the common cause for humanity, so we, here at home, are ranged shoulder to shoulder with our men in the field x x x to reach the same objective, a victorious peace that will bring justice to all the world x x x"

Portugal Writes Off Nazi Defeat As Unavoidable

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associate Press War Analyst

A culminating step in grim Allied preparations for the march on Berlin from the west came yesterday with British acquisition of anti-submarine bases in the Portuguese Azores.

That tiny but vitally important island group in mid-Atlantic provides unsinkable plane carriers for Allied use in safeguarding war traffic between the United States and Britain. Availability there of refueling and repair bases for Allied surface and air craft dealing with the U-boat menace will cut off thousands of miles of travel for combat vessels in maintaining their winter sea patrols.

That Portuguese act of benevolent neutrality tends to double or even quadruple the effectiveness of the U-boat hunting forces in the North Atlantic. And it is over that route to Britain that troops and supplies from the United States must travel unchecked to insure maximum Allied hitting power when the hour for attack from the west strikes.

With stepping-stone bases in the Azores to count upon, the whole business of flying heavy American bombers to Britain for use in breaching Nazi west wall defenses might be revolutionized. The Portuguese islands lie 2,400 miles due east of New York. But they are closer to Halifax or the southeastern tip of Newfoundland and within reach of fully war loaded ships taking off for the west front attack.

May Influence Spain

There are other ominous portents for the Nazis in Portugal's grant of base facilities to her ancient ally.

Britain. It means that Portuguese authorities, standing at one of the best informed European listening posts, have written off German defeat as inevitable. That must have weight in Spain, and in Argentina on this side of the Atlantic. The Azores incident could set off political upheavals leading to an alignment with the United Nations fellowship in either country.

It is hardly to be doubted, also, that the British-Portuguese deal is a forerunner of what Turkey, Britain's neutral ally in the Mediterranean, will do whenever London signals her into the war. And the time for that cannot be very remote with the Russians battering effectively at the Nazi defense front along the Dnieper.

The most important battle bulletins of the day came from Russia. They told of further Russian advances on Gomel, pivot of Nazi outpost defenses still east of the Dnieper in White Russia along the Sozh tributary of the Dnieper.

With Gomel lost, every Dnieper crossing above as well as below the mouth of the Pripiet would become a new potential Russian bridgehead. The German communications network west of the river, already badly snarled by Russian penetrations and behind-the-line guerrilla operations, would be fatally vulnerable. A German retreat into Poland for a stand along the Polish Bug is clearly possible unless Red thrusts across the Dnieper above and below Kiev can be checked or wiped out. Such a retreat before the Nazi right flank in the lower Dnieper bend and in the Crimea would invite a maximum military disaster.

Nor can the political situation for the Nazis in the Balkans be much short of critical. Weeks ago President Roosevelt indicated to Congress that there was good reason to anticipate a collapse of the Axis satellite structure in Bulgaria and Rumania in the near future. The military situation for Germany in Russia has become far graver since then; and the reports of pro-Allied unrest in both countries against the Berlin dominated government regimes are more frequent.

Russian consolidation of bridgeheads west of the Dnieper could be the straw that breaks the back of Nazi influence in the Balkans and invites Allied invasions to capitalize on another political "windfall" like the quick collapse of Italy.

Carloadings Increase

Carloadings handled by the Baltimore and Ohio during the week ended October 9, 1943, totaled 74,282 made up of 44,859 loaded on line and 29,423 received from connections. This was an increase of 5,773 cars as compared with the same week of last year when the total was 68,509 consisting of 40,384 loaded on line and 28,125 received from connections.

During the preceding week (the week ended October 2) the total was 75,616, including 46,446 loaded on line and 29,170 received from connections. Carloadings handled during the same week of 1939 were 66,373 comprising 43,130 loaded on line and 23,243 received from connections.

BALTIMORE WOMAN WILL SPEAK HERE FRIDAY EVENING

Mrs. Frederick Twie, Baltimore, state organizer of the Navy Mothers Club, Incorporated, will speak at the meeting Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the Central YMCA, when a local chapter of the club will be organized.

All mothers who have sons or daughters in the navy, coast guard or marine corps are invited to attend the meeting and become charter members of the club, Chief Petty Officer Walter B. Warme announced last evening.

Mrs. George W. Woodworth, Allegheny inn, who has organized several Navy Mothers clubs, will preside at the meeting.

Many navy mothers here have inquired about the organization, Warme said. The club, he stressed, is not just a wartime organization, but will continue to operate after the war is won.

KEYSER, W. Va., Oct. 12—Mineral county teachers of the first three grades of the elementary schools attended a demonstration in reading, conducted by Miss Mildred Neal in the Keyser elementary building today. Miss Neal is in the employ of the Macmillan Publishing Company.

At the forenoon session, she used a class of first year pupils for her work and in the afternoon the pupils were of the second grade. Her method of approach showed her to be a master teacher of reading to pupils of the early grades.

Railroad Cars Run Wild

A number of freight cars in the Keyser yard of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad ran wild early this morning and before they could be steamed by wardmen, ten of them got beyond control and ran into a switching engine near the Main street crossing.

The wreckage blocked both through tracks as well as the siding. Wrecking crews were soon removing the debris. Traffic was tied up until 11 o'clock this morning.

Several cars loaded with coal were derailed and the coal scattered along the tracks.

Better Health for Better Living

• The last three decades have brought many changes in matters pertaining to health. The normal span of life has been increased materially. Consider diabetes, for example. Diabetes was first recognized about the time of Moses, or 200 years before the birth of King Tut. Yet, it was not until 1922 that a specific remedy was discovered. Today, through the use of insulin and a balanced diet, the diabetic can reasonably expect to live about as long as anybody. Your physician will promptly recognize the symptoms of diabetes. He knows all about the treatment. And remember this, all advertised cures for diabetes are fakes. Don't be victimized by the swindlers.

More Thought Needed On Flood Control

FURTHER SERIOUS DISCUSSION of flood control plans for Cumberland is in order inasmuch as four possible plans have been submitted to the mayor and city council, and the municipal zoning and planning commission by United States Army engineers for an early decision.

The people of Cumberland are fairly well informed as to the reasons for rejection of the Col. Thomas, or definite project plan, of flood control by the Citizens Flood Control Sub-committee appointed by Mayor Thomas W. Koon, which committee, comprising engineers for the most part, went into the various projects exhaustively and painstakingly on the basis of a survey by army engineers costing around $100,000.

That plan was described as "a logical approach within the prescribed limitations to a flood control scheme, as by it the waterway area would be returned to the streams whence they have been taken during the years since the city was founded. It provided for flood protection for a large, though limited, area of the city, at the lowest combined cost, which would take care of a flood thirty per cent greater than that of March 17, 1936—the greatest on record."

But, the conclusion of the sub-committee was that the cheapest and simplest plan would not be the best for Cumberland. As the report stated, "Cumberland should not be condemned to an enlarged unsightly ditch through the heart of the city, except as a last resort. Efforts should be made to beautify, not despoil; and when the urgent needs of cross-town traffic, parking, additional traffic lanes and beautification are considered, it is evident that all efforts should be directed toward combining all these into a single, comprehensive and satisfying project." The pressure conduit plan was favored because it overcame these obstacles and because in the end it would be more beneficial and less expensive to the city.

The sub-committee declared that it would be impossible to secure favorable action on any flood plan which did not provide protection for all major sections of the city and stressed the opposition that would be met from many outside the flood zone and those in the flood zone who would not be protected. That factor carries equal weight today. It admitted, however, that the definite project plan was "susceptible to expansion to protect the above-mentioned areas when economically justified, as shown in the engineers' 'Comprehensive Plan.'" This possibility of expansion has been noted in the latest report by the army engineers.

Before going further into a renewed study of flood control plans, which should continue during the interim allowed for it between now and November 15, two points deserve some elucidation, in the opinion of this newspaper.

One is the discrepancy which appears in mounting costs. The latest engineer report states that the pressure conduit plan would now cost $11,000,000 or thereabout. The Thomas report indicated that the cost would be $7,250,000 (of which the cost to the city would be only $625,000). That is a pretty stiff advance, predicated doubtlessly upon the inflation we have since experienced. But the recent engineer report suggests the cost of a Knobley mountain tunnel project at $11,000,000 whereas the Thomas report set down the cost of a Cedar Cliff tunnel project at $8,343,000 and a Ridgeley tunnel at $6,166,800. Perhaps, however, it is a case of mild guesswork in both instances.

The other point is that new legislation will be necessary unless the original congressional appropriation on which the Thomas plan was built—and on which it had to be built—is utilized before the present Congress rises. Well, there should be no difficulty about new legislation in view of the federal government to evolve an over-all Potomac river basin project with several purposes backing it. The old bill was entirely inadequate for meeting the local flood control problem. It is not sacrosanct. It need not be kept alive. Another bill could very easily take its place. There is the aid that can be given by the present representative of this district in the House of Representatives, where appropriations must originate, who, fortunately, is a member of its Flood Control committee, as well as its Roads committee, which latter fact is not without connection.

A Serious Tax Threat Remains

THERE IS CONSIDERABLE ENCOURAGEMENT in the fact that the national administration's newest tax proposals have met determined opposition from congressional leaders. But a serious threat remains. For the proposals disclose a startling tendency toward, rather than away from, more hidden taxes.

In that trend alone rests one of the gravest sins of modern government. Revenues are the sinews of the state, and it is one of the oldest tricks in history for government to befuddle the people into believing taxes are low when, in actuality, they are tremendous.

Ample justification can be made for taxing luxury items at any time, but the theory itself is a highly dangerous and misleading one. Cigarettes, for instance, are a luxury item. But how many persons in the United States, paying fifteen cents for a package of cigarettes, know how much hidden tax they are paying to the government? Taxes on cigarettes are now $3.50 a thousand, and in the government's latest proposal the tax would be increased to $5 a thousand—or ten cents a package.

That is the curse of the hidden tax. It drains millions from the taxpayers, keeps administrations in power and befuddles the people. If every hidden tax in the United States were abolished and the funds placed on the public tax bill an average citizen would be literally shocked at the amount of money he would have to pay out of his pay check to meet the demands of the national government.

The day of efficient, businesslike government will come when the tax bill is placed in the open for all to see, when the workingman, the white collar worker, the executive, the housewife, the laborer see for themselves the weekly deduction from the pay envelope. When a man drawing $40 a week sees $20 or $25 being drained off to meet his government's requirements, he is going to awake to the terrifying inefficiencies of government.

Hidden taxes have always been levied as emergency measures, but the emergency never ends. The hidden tax, naturally, is the politician's delight. It raises the revenue the government wants, the taxpayer is unaware of what causes his pain and the politico can come back home and prattle about his record for economy.

Essential Provision For Postwar Jobs

THE AVIATION INDUSTRY, which has been developed to a high point of efficiency and volume through the necessities of war, could meet its present pay rolls for only about two weeks if war contracts were cancelled tomorrow, according to Thomas M. Girdler, board chairman of the Republican Steel and Vultee Aircraft corporations.

Net earnings of the industry are very small, and Girdler says they should be small in wartime, but he warns that it has no opportunity to fortify itself against the postwar period, which may come suddenly, and so create postwar jobs.

Girdler says the industry does not want to be subsidized in this period in order to guarantee employment and holds that it need not be. It wants the chance to pay for itself through legislation allowing greater reserves for postwar conversion.

What is said regarding the aircraft industry applies equally to industry in general, which for the most part has been geared to wartime production. Unless some preparation is made here for peacetime production, this country will fall into a depression far greater and more disastrous than that which was brought on by the First World War.

Motorists who never pause at railway crossings are advised that Class 1 railroads have 408 new locomotives in operation.

Hitler's European "living room" is complete save for one glaring oversight. He forgot to put a roof on it.

Prejudices

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Trouble is a man gets his prejudices mixed up with his virtues. He has prejudices enough and they influence his conduct, but he'll deny they are prejudices. He'll say he doesn't like a certain type of person or a certain race, and then he'll spend much time and trouble proving that those prejudices are good for him.

Marshall Maslin

If a high fence blocked off his view of beauty and truth, he'd try to tear that fence down, but he'll let a prejudice stand in his way and boast of it. If he had gophers in his garden, he'd set traps and catch them. He'd not be leaving them there to burrow and feed and multiply and pull his flowers into the dark earth and smile happily when the last one was caught. . . . But he'll not do that with a prejudice.

The oyster makes a pearl of an irritation; a man thinks he can make a bright jewel out of a prejudice. If his eyes hurt, he'll get himself glasses and adjust the deficiency. But if he squints when he looks at other human beings and sees them all twisted and ugly, he prides himself on the clarity of his vision. . . . If he has an aching tooth he runs yowling to a dentist and does not try to prove that decay is healthy. . . . But if he has a prejudice in him, why then, prejudices are what all sane men should have. I look in a book of quotations and find Voltaire saying, "Prejudice is the reason of fools." But if that were true, then prejudices would be harmless enough, for fools are rarer than the prejudiced think and even the shrewd Voltaire did not always think perfectly. Prejudice does not spare intelligent any more than cold germs do, and those who are sure they have none may harbor many. . . . How do I know so much about prejudices? Well, I found one on me yesterday. It popped out like a mischievous bad throwing rocks from behind a fence. I had not suspected it but there it was, disguised as wisdom, pretending to be perfect. Did I show that prejudice the door? . . . I think so. I hope I did. But I can't be sure. Come back ten years from now and I'll let you know for sure.

Plea for Chinese Is Seen as Mark Of Statesmanship

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—President Roosevelt sent a notable message to Congress this week when he asked that our national legislature correct the injustice done the Chinese people ever since 1882—the year when the Chinese were first excluded from entering the United States.

David Lawrence

The sentence which will attract world-wide attention and which is a splendid example of statesmanship is the following: "Nations, like individuals, make mistakes. We must be big enough to acknowledge our mistakes of the past and to correct them."

The Chinese are the only people actually named in our laws as an excluded class, the term applying to other peoples barred being "Orientals." This doubtless has been used so as to avoid direct mention of the Japanese. It is to be observed that Mr. Roosevelt makes a significant reference to the Japanese in this paragraph:

"While it (the proposed action) would give the Chinese a preferred status over certain other Oriental people, their great contribution to the cause of decency and freedom entitles them to such preference."

Consistent Friendliness

American friendliness to China has been consistent through the last fifty years and yet the Chinese people have been excluded from America. The original objection came from labor organizations which feared that the cheaply paid Chinese coolies would be brought into America to work on jobs which our citizens, requiring a higher standard of living, would not be able to hold without much higher pay.

But in 1921 the quota system was introduced by Congress. That law provided that a certain percentage of the various nationalities already resident in the United States would be admitted and subsequently the statutes have been revised but always with the quota system retained. Thus, at present the quota for European countries is figured on the basis of the number of those nationalities resident in America in 1920 as it is related to a total of 150,000. If a certain nationality had five per cent of America's population in 1920, then the quota would be five per cent of 150,000 or 7,500. The countries of this hemisphere are not under a quota, but the immigration laws excluded all nationalities which had been previously barred, which means that both Chinese and Japanese have not been admitted to entry for many years.

Hughes Pleaded for Japs

When Charles Evans Hughes was secretary of state in the Harding administration, he begged Congress to allow the Japanese to come in under a quota. Actually it would have meant only about 100 immigrants from Japan per year. The number was insignificant, but the Japanese wanted very much to be removed from the excluded class and to be placed under the same quota system that applied to European peoples. The Japanese felt that this would lift the discrimination which they believed had been leveled against them and would not keep them on the same basis as the Chinese.

Now the tables are reversed. If Congress passes the legislation recommended by President Roosevelt, it will be the Chinese who will be the first to be lifted out of the excluded class and the Japanese will remain with other Orientals. There was a time when the Japanese might have been given the same treatment but the opponents of the proposal as it affected the Japanese feared that to lift the bars for the Japanese would mean lifting it for the Chinese.

Ambassador Recalled

Mr. Hughes expressed himself vehemently on the point, and the Japanese government recalled its ambassador as a mark of disapproval. At that time the liberal elements were dominant in Japan, while the militarists and fascists were striving to develop an intense nationalism. The militarists and jingoes of the 20's made effective propaganda use of the hesitancy of the American Senate to let 100 Japanese into the United States. Thoughtful opinion of the period, both in the press and among public men, leaned toward the idea that American had made a grave diplomatic mistake.

With the present feeling toward Japan, it is doubtful whether admission of Japanese to America in the postwar period will be permitted. Certainly the recent beheading of an Allied flier and the execution of the American fliers have given the American people the idea that the Japanese are not civilized. It will be a long time before the liberals in Japan will be able to erase the impressions now being made by the Japanese ruling class, apparently without protest by the liberals.

Plenty of Stuff For Willie

He Doesn't Have To Fall Back On "Liberalism." Reader Declares

Editor The Cumberland News: May I endorse your views on use of the over-worked word "liberal," as pointed out in your able editorial of Oct. 9? It is certainly a sign of poverty of ideas, for Willie, or any one else, to try to use the label of liberal after all the blunders and innumerable errors that have been committed by New Dealers parading under that title.

Mr. Willie did not win 27,000,000 votes in 1940 by use of any such catchword. His theme, first, last and all the campaign was "against a third term."

He lacked only a few million votes of being elected. If he had broadened his campaign to include a few of the worst errors and inequities of the New Deal, he might have won.

I am wondering if the lesson of that campaign was lost on Mr. Willie. Most national elections are won by the voters voting against a candidate or policy. They voted against Al Smith, every one knows why. They voted against Herbert Hoover, for a second term. Hard times have always defeated any candidate. Besides he lost support of the farmers by the ill advised farm relief measure and soured everybody by his moratorium of foreign debts, which meant a cancellation of ten billion dollars of money owed to the United States.

Back in 1896, so oldsters remember how the voters voted against Bill Bryan and his 16 to 1 silver lunacy, rather than for McKinley and his high tariff.

Any candidate who is nominated next year to defeat Roosevelt, who cannot find enough indictments against the New Deal to keep him busy till election day, had better stop before he begins. If he covers only the high spots of the most glaring, notorious and infamous of these charges, he won't have time to bother with but slightest reference to his party platform.

Anyhow he can forget the word

Paul Mallon

These points no doubt will be brought out publicly, and proved in detail when the technical advisor of the travelling senators, George Malone, nationally esteemed mining engineer of Nevada, writes his report dealing with the economic aspects of the senators' voyage.

This additional report of the trip will show that these British, Dutch and French empire outposts have things we want. New Caledonia, for instance, has nickel and chrome. We need all we can get of those metals.

Report a Clincher

The Malone report should nail down incontrovertibly the additional economic reasons for doing what the army and navy defenders of this country already think necessary for our future national security in an air world.

If we do not retain the right to use the airfields and harbors upon which we have spent millions of lend-lease money throughout the world, if we do not protect our rights to trade in those areas which we are supposed to be liberating for freedom, if we do not maintain the strategic defenses with which we are winning this war, we will be just plain fools.

Imperialism means something different than this. It means world liberal, as from frequent use by all sorts, it is nothing but a "weasel word," as Teddy used to say. Anyone who relies clear, concise, unmistakable words and phrases, let him read the leading article in October Readers Digest, by Eric Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who recently addressed a like chamber in London, England.

New Movie Camera Can Shoot 8,000 Frames a Second

By CENTRAL PRESS

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Out of a desire to obtain better performance of telephone equipment has come a new high-speed motion picture camera, capable of speeds up to 8,000 frames per second.

Designed by Bell telephone laboratories and manufactured by Western Electric, the new camera has already found a number of applications among war contractors whose engineering problems include the design of fast moving parts or the analysis of high speed action.

The camera, which has been given the name "Fastax," is the result of many years' search for a high speed analytic tool for the engineer. They wished to learn why a certain type of electrical relay used in telephone circuits developed poor contact conditions resulting in improper circuit operation. Again, there were such fast moving operations as the dial central office switching devices, movements so rapid that it is next to impossible to see by visual examination just what is happening during the switching cycle.

The camera which they designed does not look too dissimilar to a conventional motion picture camera. Two models are available which make pictures respectively of the standard eight millimeter and 16 millimeter. In each model either 16 mm. or the so-called "double-eight" film may be used.

Prism Replaces Shutter

The rotary shutter of the conventional motion picture camera is missing in the new machine. In its place, between the lens and the film plane, is a four or eight-sided glass prism, with opposing face parallel; an exposure slit is provided ahead of and behind the prism.

The prism rotates 60,000 revolutions a minute while taking pictures at top speed, and acts both to provide a steady image on the fast moving film and to perform the functions of a shutter. Light rays picked up by the lens on the film surface as it rests on the face of the sprocket; when the prism is at rest the image is projected along the dotted lines.

However, as the prism rotates in synchronism with the film sprocket the image is displaced by the refraction and rotation of the prism, so that it travels in step with the film across the exposure slit.

Rays Are Shuttered

As soon as the prism has rotated to the point where the light rays might strike two adjoining prism faces, the prism housing performs the functions of a barrel shutter, blocking the light from the film and so forming the frame line.

Film travel in the Fastax reaches the amazing speed of 70 miles per hour while the camera is running at its highest taking rate.

Duration of exposure at maximum camera speed with the four-sided (16 millimeter) prism is about 33 millionths of a second, while the eight-sided (8-millimeter) prism is about 33 millionths of a second.

In order to take fully illuminated pictures with available lenses and high speed film when exposures are measured in such minute fractions of a second, it is necessary that light of extreme intensity be employed.

Color Film Usable

However, by keeping the photographed area to a small size the focused, overexposed filaments of a few 150-watt show window spotlights having the sealed-beam reflector, are sufficient for full exposure at 8,000 picture-per-second speeds.

The versatility of the Fastax has enabled it to be used in many unusual applications. Since it does not depend upon the gaseous discharge lamp for illumination, Kodachrome has been used successfully; notable are the natural color high speed pictures of the production of speech by the vocal chords.

Also, polarized light has been used in some tests, particularly in studying the stress and impact conditions in transparent materials. It is also possible to take high-speed pictures of self-luminous objects, such as filaments of incandescent lamps under test.

Many of the current applications of the Fastax are on highly restricted projects and naturally cannot be discussed at this time. But high speed analysis is here to stay and its application to tomorrow's research will play a big part in making the mechanical servants of the post-war civilian more efficient, less costly and more widely distributed.

A Query Is Propounded

From the Tyler Star-News, Sistersville, W. Va.

Does "globe trotting," run-a-bout Eleanor have to go to New Zealand, Australia, Europe, etc., when they are crying for gasoline. When they advise mothers to not go to camp to see their sons and loved ones before they go over-seas?

When the public does not have enough transportation to carry on legitimate business?

Why does she go to these countries to make speeches to the boys in the army and to foreign countries blasting the American ideals of government?

It is the $64,000 question, but the United States will probably pay $100,000 for her trip. And they tell us to buy bonds till it hurts. And it HURTS to see it thrown away in this manner. She's home "again" but how soon will she be "off again"? Again we ask: Why? Why? Why?

To do what we will, is natural liberty; to do what we may consistently with the interests of the community to which we belong, is civil liberty, the only liberty to be desired in a state of civil society. —PALEY.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

"HOW DO YOU know?" asked
Adam when Brenda informed him that someone had visited the Johnson farm last night.

"I drove over there," Brenda said. "Since I wanted to look around the old boat landing, and leading up to the house."

"Did you look at the house too?"
"Yes, I did—and it looked just the way it did when you were out there."

"Then it would seem that the footprints mean nothing at all."

"Perhaps so, but you told me to report anything I saw," Brenda shook her head slowly. "Maybe I'm suffering from a bad case of feminine intuition, but I can't help feeling there's something strange going on out there."

"It's not feminine intuition," said Adam. "Or if it is, I have an attack also. Did you see the boat again?"

"Yes," said Brenda, "but it was way down the river."

Adam was thoughtful for a moment. "I keep thinking that we'll discover something out there sooner or later, and then—"

"You mean a small boat might Adam nodded. "It could happen,

"Yes, but it sounds melodramatic—

"Sure, but if there ever was a

"It's hard to say," Adam replied.
"Only I've been studying the geo-

I got a map from the courthouse, and—"

He stopped short, dug under a pile of papers and brought out the map to which he had referred. "Look," he said. "Then, as Brenda stepped to his side and bent down, her cheek almost touching his, he went on. "This little river of ours empties into that larger stream. See? And then that stream eventually reaches the sea."

"As do all streams—eventually."

"Right! Only a fellow with a launch like the one you described could, if he wished to, navigate it all the way from the Johnson farm to—to well, say a spot where a larger boat from the sea could contact it, and then—"

"I haven't the remotest idea."

"I'm going to make a point of motor boat."

Adam then told her about the pantry woman's nephew. "So, you see," he added, "I DO have a reason, for feeling jittery."

"Are you sure that the boat I saw is the same one the woman's nephew purchased?" Brenda wanted to know.

"Yes," said Adam. "Susan Potter got it out of her. She told me early this morning." He chuckled.

"By the way, you and Susan are running a close race as G-women."

"Good!" said Brenda. "Susan's drop my handkerchief. I shall attract attention, however. Never fear."

"I shan't," said Adam. "You'd attract attention anywhere."

"Is that a compliment, Adam?"

"Of course."

"Then thanks. And thanks also for giving me a pass. Anyone would have a hard time getting by that gateman of yours without one."

"When will you report?"

"As soon as there is anything to report," said Brenda. "Anyway, I shall see you tomorrow night at rehearsal. Thank heavens, Mrs. Platt gave us all an evening off." She walked to the door, blew Adam a little kiss and was gone.

Adam sank back in his chair and began rolling up the map he had shown Brenda. He was tempted to leave the office and drive out to the Johnson farm to satisfy himself that those footprints Brenda had seen meant nothing — nothing at all. But he resisted the temptation, and forced himself to attend to the work at hand.

And it was just as well, for he wouldn't have found anything out at the farm. It would have been found just as Brenda had said. Bill Potter and Ken Randolph were finding this out.

"Well, I'll be darned," said Bill. "Just plain, unadulterated darned." He stood on the porch of the farmhouse. "Empty—dusty—not lived in for years, and yet I could swear I saw those men unloading something."

"Maybe you were seeing things—after too many of Alicia Carter's mint juleps," said Ken.

"Don't talk like an idiot!" Bill snapped. "I tell you I was stone sober—and I saw a boat, and—"

"And men unloading," said Ken. "Yes, so you said a few times before."

"You believe me, don't you?" said Bill earnestly.

"I believe what you say," said Ken, "but not what you saw." He walked toward the roadster. "Come on, let's get back to town."

"Anyway," said Bill, as he slid in behind the wheel, "I still think it would be a good idea to drop Alicia's property and concentrate on this old farm. It would make a good setting for cottages, and we ought to be able to buy it for a song."

"Sure," said Ken, "but where're we going to sing the song for? We can't buy property when there's no one around to sell it."

"I'll take that up with the court-house," said Bill. "They have records, and maybe the last address of some member of the Johnson family. Maybe they've been sending money for taxes."

"Forget it," said Bill. "You've a wife, and—"

"And she holds the pursestrings," said Ken somewhat wryly.

Limping Footstep Is Terror Signal in Film

Sounds of the dragging footsteps of a cripple are so important in "The Fallen Sparrow," RKO Radio's big movie of love and espionage in modern New York City, that the studio hired a crippled man to produce them for sound recording. The film starts tomorrow at the Liberty theater.

John Garfield, who co-stars with Maureen O'Hara in the spy thriller, plays the role of a young American adventurer to whom the footsteps signal terror. Once they meant that he would be tortured in a Spanish prison for information the Nazis wanted.

Now, in the United States, they mean that more subtle but no less deadly peril surrounds him. Even if he hears the sound when in the embrace of one of the three beautiful women who make love to him in the picture, it brings cold sweat on his forehead.

Shut Out Wins Laurel Stakes Before 13,444

Son of Equipoise Defeats With Regards in Stretch Battle

By DONALD SANDERS
BALTIMORE, Oct. 12 (AP)—Dis- playing the form which carried him to the top of the three year-old heap last season, Shut Out, carried the familiar pink and black silks of the Greenree stable to victory in the $10,000-added Laurel stakes be- fore a Columbus day crowd of 13,444 persons at Pimlico today.

Equipoise's best son had to go all out in the stretch to win the thirti- eth running of this transplanted Laurel park fixture, edging out Mrs. Josephine Grimes's With Regards by a neck after the two had raced side by side down the stretch.

Jockey Eddie Arcaro piloted the four-year-old chestnut over the mile and seventy yards in 1:42 2-5, just one fifth of a second off the track record.

The victory was Shut Out's fourth in fourteen starts this year, and the $9,175 he earned boosted his 1943 total to $31,425.

Son of Peace Third

Third money was taken by Calu- met farm's Son of Peace, which finished a length behind With Re- gards. David Strauss's Daily Trouble was fourth in the field of seven.

With Regards, making his second start in four days, sprinted into an early lead which he and Jockey Johnny Longden stretched out to six lengths as they headed into the backstretch.

Shut Out, running easily, started to move up in the backstretch and had to out the pace-setter's margin to four lengths as they entered the far turn.

With Regards still held a two-length advantage as he came into the stretch in mid-track, and Shut Out edged up on the rail to take the lead midway down the stretch.

The 1942 Kentucky derby and Belmont stakes winner was coupled in the wagering with his stablemate, Famous Victory, and the entry re- ceived their backers at the rate of $4.60, $2.40 and $2.20 for a $2 ticket.

Juvenile Stake Stated

Meanwhile, the first of the Mary- land joint meeting's nine stakes for two year-olds, to be contested to- morrow, attracted a field of thir- teen juveniles, headed by the Al- fred P. Parker colt, By Jimmy.

By Jimmy drew the top impost of 122 pounds for the $5,000 added Richard Johnson stakes, another transplanted Laurel park fixture.

The Parker colt, winner of the coupled in the wagering with E. R. Grand Union Hotel stakes, was Bradley's Black Gang.

Both colts are Bradley-breds and are trained by James W. Smith.

The Richard Johnson, which is run at six furlongs, also attracted Ella K. Bryson's Good Bid, Vim and Director J. E.; Mrs. H. J. Mohr's Royal Prince; Greenree stable's Diastman; Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Grimes's Autocrat and others.

George Stineweiss, Yankee rookie, is famous for his speed, but he was beaten by Charley Keller, the team's strong boy.

World Series Nerves

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 12.—World Series nerves—not nerve—are en- tirely different among different players. For example, Spud Chan- dler, who looks calmer than the surface of a summer lake, is always highly keyed up, a bundle of nerves that call for stout control.

In fact one of Chandler's few weak spots is that in the past he has tried to put more on the ball than any one arm could deliver.

"I used to think Spud was trying to knock off my glove," Bill Dickey once told me.

But Chandler had better control of his nervous system in his open- ing start.

Bill Johnson, while a rookie, seems to have little trouble curb- ing his nerves. Bill is as keen as the type that can even take a first World Series in his stride with- out bothering too much.

Few rookies in their first world series play ever get the idea that a World Series game is just another ball game. Johnson is likely to hit much better in this series than he did through the season. And he is also hitting against better than average pitching.

The calmest and most confident pitcher I've ever seen in any World Series was Dizzy Dean.

I recall the day he was warming up in Detroit to face the Tigers. Some one came up and said the odds were 9 to 5 on the Cardinals for the opening game.

"Them gamblers is sure smart people," Dizzy said with a broad grin. "They know a sure thing when they see it."

Dizzy actually wanted to pitch that entire series. I was talking about this with Ole Dix yesterday.

"I didn't figure I could win four in a row," he said, "but I sure figured I could win four out of five."

It is Spud Chandler's idea that a competitor has to be keyed up before any contest started to have the needed flame and fire later on. This is often true—but not always.

For example the most relaxed foot- ball player I recall off-hand was Red Grange. You were likely to find Red stretched out on the ground, apparently half asleep just before the kick off.

Memphis Bill Mallory of Yale was another similar type, carefree and lazy looking be- fore the game started, but a great competitor once the action com- menced.

Strange enough the younger Cardinals of a year ago were not as tightened up as the 1943 crop were at the start through the three opening games. It may be they missed the soothing and calming influence of Terry Moore and Country Slaughter. Whatever took place, it was a shock to their supporters as error began to pile on error, many of these on the easiest and simplest sort of chances.

An error a game was bad enough but an average of nearly 3 errors per game was something else again—something quite different.

Breaks and Not Baseball Skill Decided Series

Pitching Good but Not Spectacular -- Cards' Klein Disappoints

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Base- ball has wrapped up another war- time World Series and in some re- spects it might be a good idea to leave it right there under cover.

The truth is that the fortieth classic of the diamond, as it is sometimes called, was not a memor- able World Series.

It drew larger crowds than last year's record attendance, produced a new high players' pool and pro- vided more than $300,000 for war charities, yet it fell short by the one standard on which it can be measured against previous classics—good baseball performance.

This, perhaps, was to be expect- ed because both the New York Yan- kees and St. Louis Cardinals were of necessity make-shift ball clubs and had players on the field who would not have been even on the bench in peace time.

Jumbled Exhibition

The result was a jittery, jumbled exhibition in which fifteen errors were made in five games and the series was decided on breaks rather than on baseball skill. The Yan- kees deserved to win because they had the championship spirit to take advantage of the openings where they occurred.

Pitching, which decides most series and which was the one reason the Yankees were established in ad- vance as favorites for this classic, was not the deciding factor as it turned out. The huriling for both sides was good, although scarcely spectacular, and, taking an over- all view, the Cardinals had the best of it.

But the Redbirds were badly overshadowed in two departments in which they had claimed superi- ority—fielding and base running. Instead of the Cardinals giving a wild base-running ory like they did last year to beat the Yanks, this year it was New York which literally ran over the Cardinals on the base paths.

No Great Stars

There were no great stars in the series and no easily identifiable goats. Joe Gordon, who had been both in the past—a hero in 1941 and a bust in 1942, fegained his place of eminence among second base- men and set a new series fielding record. Frank Crosetti was more outstanding not exactly a star but more precisely a pest. He was mixed up in more important plays during the five games than any other player. Bill Johnson was the leading hitter with six safeties, in- cluding a triple that broke open the third ball game. Bill Dickey's catching was masterful as always and his homer accounted for yester- day's 2 to 0 triumph in the final game. The one unquestionably fine pitching performance was given by Lefty Marius Russo in winning on Sunday.

The Cardinals' collapse was gen- eral, but one of the biggest busts certainly was Lou Klein, who bat- ted .285 and knocked in sixty-three runs in the regular season, but who had an average of .136 at bat in the series. In five games he left thirteen runners stranded on the bases, twice making the final out in an inning with the sacks loaded.

The one member of the series cast who gained new lustre was Manager Joe McCarthy, the 56- year-old manager of the Yankees. It was his seventh world champion- ship in nine trips to the series, and his strategy from start to finish was faultless.

Fast in High School

Ernie Parks, Ohio's new negro backfield star, was high school sprint champion at both 100 and 200 yards.

Fort Hill's Don Whiteman Sets Pace in City Grid Scoring Race

Sentinel Halfback Gathers 39 Points in Three Games; LaSalle's Passarelli Second

With Cumberland's scholastic football season one-third over, Don "Bubbles" Whiteman, Fort Hill halfback, holds a commanding lead in the race for city scoring honors.

The speedy and elusive Sentinel star, although limited to one touch- down by LaSalle's Explorers in the hard-fought intra-city series opener last Saturday night, has accounted for a total of thirty-nine points—a half dozen touchdowns and three extra points—in three games.

Francis "Scooter" Passarelli, who snared eighteen markers in La- Salle's opener against Moorefield, failed to score in the Explorers' suc- ceeding contests but holds the No. 2 spot.

Allegany's Walter Davis and Joe Carter, LaSalle quarterback, are tied for third place with thirteen tallies apiece. Davis has made but one touchdown but he booted seven extra points from placement in eight attempts to lead that depart- ment by a wide margin.

Sentinels Are Unbeaten

Clay "Red" Ingram, of LaSalle, and Ronnie Kellough, diminutive Allegany halfback, share fifth place with a dozen markers. Ten boys, including six from Allegany, have gone over opponents' goal lines for single touchdowns.

Fort Hill, with three straight vic- tories, has the best record in the city. LaSalle, knocked out of the unbeaten column by the Sentinels by a 7-6 score, and Allegany each have captured two of three battles.

From the standpoint of points, Fort Hill has the best offense and de- fense. The Sentinels have gath- ered sixty-nine tallies while yield- ing one touchdown. Allegany has scored sixty-one points, forty-seven of them against Ridgeley, and La- Salle has registered forty-five mark- ers. The Campers have given up twenty-four points and the Explor- ers thirteen.

Allegany has made the most first downs, thirty-two, with LaSalle a second with thirty-one and Fort Hill bringing up the rear with twen- ty-eight. The Sentinels and West- Siders have allowed nineteen first downs and LaSalle only sixteen.

LaSalle Defense Sparkles

Fort Hill holds the edge in total yards gained and yards gained by rushing with 889 and 789. LaSalle is second with 670 and 591 and Al- legany is third with 634 and 498.

The Campers have completed the most passes, fourteen of twenty- eight, and lead in pass yardage with 136. Fort Hill has the best pass-average with eight of fifteen for 100 yards. LaSalle has con- nected only four of fifteen for a total of seventy-nine yards.

LaSalle's defense has sparked, the Explorers allowing only 294 yards in three games, an average of ninety-eight per contest. Coach Phil Carolan's gridders have per- mitted opposing clubs to make only sixteen first downs, complete six of fourteen forward passes for sixty- six yards and gain 228 yards over- land.

Fort Hill and Allegany each have yielded nineteen first downs. The Sentinels' foes have picked up a total of 384 yards, eighty-five on four of thirteen passes. The Camp- ers' opponents gained 434 yards, with 139 of that figure coming over

Dodgers, Bruins Discuss Manager Jobs with Terry

One-Time Boss of Giants May Return to Base- ball Scene

By SID FEDER

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Behind the scenes in the World Series show, there was quite a bit of ac- tion indicating that William Harold (better known as plain Bill) Terry will be back in baseball as a man- ager in 1944.

Just where the one-time boss of the New York Giants will land isn't quite definite yet but the like- ly choice seems to lie between the Chicago Cubs and Brooklyn Dod- gers. The latter offers interesting possibilities because it was Sweet William who once wanted to know his Brooklyn still in the National League? that was back in '34, and when the shooting was over, the Dodgers had dumped Bill's Giants out of a pennant.

Leaves Farm for Series

Bill's been down on the farm for a year now and apparently is getting the old urge for the diamond again. He was at the series as a sports writer but it is known that he saw more than a little bit of powers that be in both the Brooklyn and Chicago organizations.

In the New York half of the series, he was to have "chinned" with Phil Wrigley, president of the Cubs, but Phil didn't get to Manhattan. However, in the St. Louis end of the set, he had quite a chat with Jim Gallagher, the Cubs' general man- ager, and the assumption is they talked about more than Bill's cat- tie and crops.

Apparently the Cubs have about given up on Jimmy Wilson as their pilot although no one is saying a word about it now, because Jimmy's contract runs until December 31. One report says the club is willing to pay Terry $30,000 a year to take the job.

Durocher Given Gate

Although Terry didn't see Wrig- ley in New York, he kept busy, nevertheless. He had at least two meetings with George V. McLaugh- lin, of the Brooklyn Trust Company, the bank that holds a lot of the Dodger purse strings. McLaughlin and Sweet William have been friends for a long time and Mc- Laughlin has long had an idea Ter- ry would be a good man to manage the Bums.

However, although President Branch Rickey has given Leo Duro- cher the gate, there never has been any apparent burning desire on the part of Branch to hire Terry. So if McLaughlin starts to pitch to get Bill into the spot, there's going to be some fun in Flatbush.

year's veteran Razorbacks. Rice has nothing but naval trainees — also no offense.

THIS WEEK'S HERO

ROBERT HOERNSCHEMEYER

freshman halfback on the Indiana university team, is being hailed as the new pass sensation of the col- lege grid world following a spec- tacular performance with the pig- skin against Nebraska at Lincoln last week.

Hoernschmeyer, nicknamed "Punchy," threw six touchdowns passes to his teammates as the Hoosiers walloped the Cornhuskers 54-13. The 177-pound, five-foot- eleven Hoosier half tossed three touchdowns passes in the first half and three more in the second. His best heave was one of thirty-seven yards.

The newest Hoosier hot-shot is a Cincinnati, O., youth. He starred in football at Elder high there last year.

Leading Hitter

Ernie Lombardi, Giant catcher, won the National League batting crown in 1938 with Cincinnati (.342) and again in 1942 as a Brave (.330).

Navy Grid Squad Begins Practice For Penn State

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 12 (AP)—Hard blocking and tackling practice was on Navy's football schedule today as the Tars settled down to preparing for their clash with Penn State in Thompson stadium Satur- day at 2:30 p. m.

Capt. John E. Whelchel, Navy's coach, reported that Bob Jenkins and Jim Pettit, two Middle backs who were injured in the Navy-Duke game last Saturday night in Bal- timore, would be out of their unning last least for this week.

The Penn State-Navy game marks the Sailors last appearance this season on naval academy grounds.

After the Penn State game, Navy will meet successively, Georgia Tech, Notre Dame, Pennsylvania, Colum- bia and Army.

The Nittany Lions from Penn State represent a combination of navy and marine trainees under the college's V-12 program.

Of the seventy-five players who turned out when the season opened at Penn State, fifty represented the armed forces. Nine of the Lions are former George Washington univer- sity students and players.

Jack Catignola, Ohio boy from the University of Dayton, is con- sidered by Navy coaches as one of America's leading quarterbacks.

Although he tips the scale at only 165 pounds, he has speed, foot- ball instinct and excellent open- field ability. He operates in the right half position for the "Statens" and is a dangerous pass receiver.

Johnny Affurs, 190-pound right guard from last year's Penn State squad, leads the Nittany line- men in performance, say the scouts.

Too, the Lions boast a top left- handed passer in Marine Trainee Mill McGuire, the number four back. He is also a former Dayton university star.

In facing Penn State, the Tar- mentors make it quite clear that they do not expect any pushover for the Middles. In fact, the Sailors worked unusually hard today to avoid any letdown after the terrific drubbing they took from the Duke Blue Devils on Saturday.

True, Navy came out the win- ner by one point (14-13), but the Devils were the strongest gridiron opponents the Middles have yet faced, and Navy was somewhat bat- tered by game's end.

Leahy Admits His Notre Dame Team Looks Fairly Good

Martin Believes Army Might Stand Chance against Irish

By WHITNEY MARTIN
NEW YORK, Oct. 12 (AP)—Frank Leahy, who would admit with a little nudging that if something looked like an apple and tasted like an apple and came from an apple tree it might be an apple, concedes that his Notre Dame football team looked fairly good against Michigan.

Now that praise coming from Leahy is equivalent to such descriptions as "super-colossal" and "stupendous" coming from a less-competent mentor, so Michigan does not seem to feel perturbed over the suggestion it was beaten by a flat-wheeled football team wheeling along in second gear.

In fact, the Michigan game, added to the Georgia Tech game of the preceding Saturday, bears out our suspicion that Leahy has a great ball club.

The suspicion was born in the Notre Dame-Pittsburgh game, but you couldn't prove anything on Notre Dame that day because the opposition was calculated to make any fairly-strong eleven look good. That is, even a 10-year-old looks big and strong, taking candy from a baby, and those 17-year-old Panthers were babes in the football woods that day.

Army Might Have Chance

But now Leahy's team has been up against two highly-touted squads and has moved them down with astonishing ease. You just can't be little that kind of success.

We've seen one team that might have a chance against Notre Dame. That is Army, and you still can't go quite as far out on the limb with Army as you can with the Irish because you can't be too sure of the strength of the Cadets' opposition.

Colgate entered the Army game well rated, but there is doubt that the Red Raiders were stout enough to provide a real test. They certainly didn't show much that day, but whether it was due to their own fault or the Army's strength is a question.

There can be no doubt of the Army's offensive power. Against teams such as Colgate and Temple the Cadets could score almost at will, and only orders from headquarters stopped them from making the margin in both games more overwhelming. Lieut. Col. Earl Black led the boys to ease up, with the result they were passing up touchdowns for a little field goal practice.

Service Elevents Are Strong

The one thing you can say about Army is that it has done everything asked of it with the greatest of ease. Fifty-one points are a lot of points, even against a good high school team, and Temple is above that category.

The big question right now is how the Cadets will run and pass against a team that has the strength to object effectively to such goings on, and whether Army, with its up-to-now smooth attack finding rough going, will be able to pull itself together and carry on. Our guess, after watching the boys in practice and in a game, is that it will.

At any rate, we think it is grand that both Army and Navy have come up with fine teams this year, of all years. They give the boys in the two branches of the service something to be proud of, and to follow avidly. They are their teams, and somehow reflect the power of the armed services.

We don't know just what Notre Dame reflects. Something pretty bright, anyway.

ODT Director Gives Conditional Approval To Orange Bowl Game

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 12 (AP)—Director Joseph Eastman, of the Office of Defense Transportation (ODT), has given conditional approval of the Orange bowl football classic New Year's day, Orange Bowl Chairman A. A. Unger announced today.

Unger said tickets would go on sale Nov. 1 and would be confined to Dade (Miami) county because of ODT's request that the game be "localized."

Red Army Edges Closer to White Russian Citadel

Soviet Forces Widen Areas of Penetration on Dnieper

By JUDSON O'QUINN
LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 13 (AP)—Soviet forces widened their areas of penetration on the west bank of the Dnieper in close quarter fighting yesterday after "battering down German counter-attacks, and the Berlin radio said the Red army had opened a new drive "north of Kiev."

The Russian operational communication and midnight supplement, broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet Monitor, disclosed today that Red army troops had edged closer to the White Russian citadel of Vitebsk in the north in the face of stern enemy opposition.

In all these active areas the Russians destroyed fifty-three planes by air combat or anti-aircraft fire, destroyed or disabled forty-two German tanks, captured two artillery batteries and silenced eight others, it was said.

Elaborates on Landing

Referring to an old and completed operation the Moscow radio, in a dispatch recorded here by the Soviet Monitor, told how the Russians once flanked the German line in the south by making a night landing from the Azov sea at Yalta, twenty miles southwest of Mariupol. To effect this operation, the landing parties beat off three German counter-attacks, the broadcast added.

This was one of the Red army thrusts which opened the way for the current push against the Dnepropetrovsk-Sevastopol rail line. Pierce local fighting was reported in the battles of the Dnieper, through which the Red army is closing in relentlessly on the Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

Enemy Tanks Destroyed

Without definitely locating the area, the communiqué said that units of one formation killed 700 of the enemy. In another area the Russians were said to have won a height dominating the surrounding country after a day-long fight. About 1,500 Germans were killed in this latter struggle, which developed into numerous hand-to-hand engagements, this communiqué said.

In still another sector of this battle front the Germans accomplished a breakthrough with eleven tanks, but Red artillerymen operating with infantrymen disabled or destroyed the tanks in a half hour, it was reported.

Approximately a battalion of German infantry was reported wiped out by Red units in the Vitebsk area to the north.

The Germans did not expand on their report of the opening of the new Russian drive "north of Kiev."

President of Yankees Is Seriously Ill

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Oct. 12 (AP)—Edward Grant Barrow, 75-year-old president of the World Champion New York Yankees, has been a patient in the New Rochelle hospital since Friday and his condition today was such that officials said they were optimistic of his recovery.

He was in the stands last Tuesday as the Yankees defeated the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of the World Series but was kept from the remaining contests by order of his physician.

Previously it was announced he was suffering from an arthritic condition but it became known today that a heart ailment and fatigue also were present.

Not only was Barrow kept from the second and third games of the World Series in New York but he was denied the broadcasts as well. By Sunday, however, he had improved and he was permitted to listen to the radio accounts of the last two games.

His message of congratulations to Manager Joe McCarthy, after the Yankees clinched the world pennant in St. Louis yesterday was one of the first received here.

Walker, Brazle Get Part of Draft Exam

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2 (AP)—Outfielder Harry Walker and Rookie Pitcher Alpha Brazle, of the St. Louis Cardinals, reported for induction today at Jefferson Barracks. They received only a part of the usual examination, however. It will be completed tomorrow.

Monthly Dinner Will Be Held By Sorority

Maryland Alpha Chapter of Delta Theta Chi sorority will hold a dinner each month, besides the monthly social, it was decided when planning the social activities for the sorority at the meeting Monday evening in the George Williams room of Central Y.M.C.A. The dinner will precede one of the semi-monthly business meetings.

The monthly party will be held at 8 o'clock, October 18, with Mrs. Catherine Beall and Mrs. Margaret Bittner hostesses. It will be at the former's home, 410 Furnace street.

The sorority marked the one hundred twenty-second anniversary of the birth of Sir George Williams, in whose honor the club room at the "Y" was named, with Mrs. Catherine Miller reading a sketch of his life, while his picture was lighted.

Mrs. Margaret Clancey presided and received committee reports from Miss Helen Heuer, social; Miss Mary Virginia Shafterman, membership; Mrs. Hazel Neal, ways and means, and Miss Jeanette Boning, war work. During the last report Red Cross kits for service men were distributed to members.

An educational program on modern composers featuring the works of George Gershwin and Victor Herbert was conducted by Miss Mary Rice. Recordings of their music were played.

Yugoslav Partisan

control of approximately half their country's coast line.

Bitter fighting continues, said the communiqué broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio, in the sectors of Susak, Otocac, Duga-Resa, Karlovac, Zara and Sinj, all north of Split.

Capture of Slankamen, on the Danube near Novisad, and Zumberak, last Ustashi stronghold west of Zagreb, also was announced. Slankamen is approximately fifty miles northwest of Belgrade.

In an attempt to quell the opposition of Liberation forces the Germans have threatened to destroy every city, town and village in Yugoslavia and to shoot an unspecified number of hostages, the war bulletin added. German planes scattered leaflets containing the threat over Yugoslav cities.

It said this threat had been carried out on the own of Novomeste, which is forty miles west of Zagreb and ten miles east of Zumberak. Reporting the complete destruction of this town by the Germans, the communiqué said "not a living soul remains" there.

Germans Beaten Off

A German attempt to storm the important partisan stronghold of Tuzla, 100 miles southwest of Belgrade, was beaten off by columns of the First Bosnian corps, operating under the Liberation army banner of Dr. Tito, the communiqué related.

Attacks on enemy rail communications on the rail lines from Zagreb to Subotica and the trunk line between Zagreb and Belgrade also were reported. Operations on the Zagreb-Subotica line occurred in the vicinity of Osijek and Nasice approximately twenty miles south of the Hungarian border.

Yugoslavs in London said they had learned that one and probably two Italian divisions still were fighting alongside the Germans in Istria and Slovenia, while at least two full Italian divisions are co-operating with the Liberation army.

The German radio claimed that the partisans lost more than 5,000 killed and 7,300 taken prisoner in fighting during the last few days on the Italian Istrian peninsula.

Floods Delaying

Island of Cos in the Dodecanese. The fourth day had passed since Gen. Clark's Fifth Army troops cleaned out the last German nests of resistance on the south bank of the Volturno and captured Capua, a principal crossing of the river.

With each day the rain had fallen harder and the twisting Volturno had risen higher to confine Clark's men to the south bank. Allied patrols crossed the stream at numerous points, but there had been no attempt to engage the Nazis in force.

The task merely of supplying Clark's forces through the hub-deep mud was described as herculean.

The Nazis have lined the north bank of the Volturno with concealed machine-gun posts and have strewn barbed wire between these advance fire points and their artillery emplacements. Allied artillery has for several days kept up a heavy and accurate fire against these Nazi gun positions and has destroyed some of them.

At points the Germans have sunk tanks into the ground and have directed their guns on likely points of crossing of the Volturno.

Federal Subsidy

the state or local boards have already increased school teachers' salaries.

Saying that every state would receive a subsidy, Middendorf added that "this is clearly a waste of federal money at a time when every dollar should be devoted to winning the war."

Secretary Ickes

ing Aug. 20, already had restored about 1,600 mines to private control, including most of the big ones.

He acted under the Smith-Connally War Labor Disputes act, which requires return of seized properties within sixty days after "normal productive efficiency" has been resumed.

Lewis, ordering his men back to work after the last coal work stoppage in June, said they would continue to work for the government until Oct. 31, and this was widely interpreted as a declaration of a "truce" until that date.

The picture has changed considerably since June, however. Lewis has appeared before the War Labor Board, a thing which he had not consented to do in June. The union and Illinois bituminous operators reached an agreement raising wages, and the WLB rejected it, whereupon the union and operators drew up another contract, which now is pending before the board. The union also came to terms with anthracite operators, and the labor board is considering that case too.

The anthracite case recently has been under renewed discussion by the WLB, but the board gave no indication of a decision, at least for several days.

Ickes, though he has praised the miners for record production of coal and though he said today the mines had returned "as nearly as possible to normal productive efficiency," has repeatedly warned that the nation is failing to produce enough for its all-time record requirements.

He said two weeks ago that the coal situation was growing worse and would continue in that direction until the operators and miners had a contract. Miners, he said, do not work at their maximum efficiency when there is uncertainty over wages and working conditions.

Italian-American

The governor praised the contributions of Italian-Americans to the war effort, citing Maryland citizens of Italian descent as first among the state's racial groups in subscribing to the Third War Loan campaign, a drive in which Maryland led the nation.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Third Service Command, told the gathering that Americans should learn from Columbus a lesson in "foresight and enlightened vision" which would serve them to lead in the postwar era.

"Untold scientific developments have been made during this present conflict which, when given full play under peacetime conditions, will prove a sure cure to unemployment and depression," Gen. Reckord asserted.

broaden provisions of the original Kilday bill.

The Kilday bill, which the House passed last April and the Senate sidetracked, provided for filling draft quotas on a statewide instead of a local board basis and set up an induction procedure under which pre-war fathers would be the last men drafted, except for non-fathers in critical jobs.

By putting the quotas on a nationwide basis, May said, and stipulating by law that dependency be considered in granting deferments, no pre-war father would be inducted so long as there was a non-father available anywhere in the country.

Mrs. Grace Stemple reported on the sale of the war bonds during the recent war loan drive and announced the results were gratifying though incomplete. Mrs. Mildred Fike talked on the national convention held recently in the Commodore hotel, N. Y., and Mrs. Alice Miller was appointed to give the weekly broadcast at 7:15 Friday over WTBO.

Reporting on the Red Cross work done last Thursday by members, Mrs. Audrey Golladay announced that thirteen pillows, one stretcher pad and one laprobe had been made, besides the regular work.

U. S. Will Use

in France if there was occasional applause here for certain people and certain happenings in France. For instance, the president said, there was the liberation of Corsica.

In discussing the Azores bases, Mr. Roosevelt indicated that the United States would have joined with Britain in seeking the agreement had it not been for the centuries-old British-Portuguese alliance.

He said that the reason the agreement was made by Britain, once he and Prime Minister Churchill had agreed it should be sought, was because of that alliance dating back to the fourteenth century.

This country has given assurances to Portugal, as has Britain, that there is no desire to take over the Azores, Mr. Roosevelt said. As for the matter of use, the president noted that Britain and the United States are allies, trying to win the war, and frequently conduct joint operations.

In emergency cases, he said, we might use the Azores bases to protect American lives. Asked if other United Nations would also use the bases to protect lives, Mr. Roosevelt said he supposed they might, but noted that it appeared probable that only the United States and Britain might have occasion to use them.

Weather in Nearby States

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA and WEST VIRGINIA—Rather windy and somewhat warmer today.

Bases Will Be

American ships which put into the Azores bases now opened to the British, for the islands housed the United States Navy's Atlantic fleet headquarters during the last war. Bases in the islands are not granted to the United States under today's agreement, however. The United States has no such treaty as that between Portugal and Britain. In 1914-18 Portugal promptly declared war on the Central Powers and her soldiers fought on the Western front.

The German news agency DNB said in a Berlin broadcast that the British-Portuguese agreement had some points not announced here, including a provision for the abolition of German consulates and other Axis consulates from the Azores, and for the deportation of Axis nationals.

Is Temporary Measure

British occupation of naval and air bases on the Azores, which Churchill said was a temporary measure not prejudicing Portuguese sovereignty in any way, will complete a great circle of island outposts guarding the Allies' all-vital Atlantic sealanes and will close the last gap in the oceanwide air patrol which once already has driven the U-Boat packs into port.

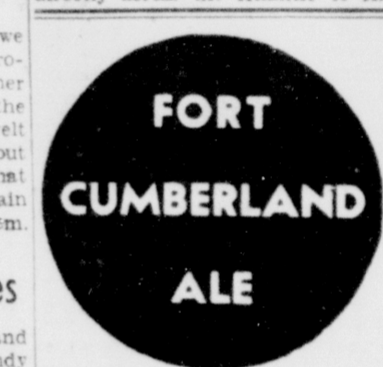

The southern extension of the anti-U-Boat barriers thus will help fulfill the first essential condition for victory and the invasion of Europe specified by Churchill after the Casablanca conference—defeat of the submarine.

With their big international seaplane base, naval harbors and military barracks all probably ready for immediate use, the nine Azores islands will:

1. Give the Allies land bases for anti-U-Boat sea and air patrols.
2. Unleash the Allies to provide a 24-hour air patrol over all routes from the United States to Europe and the Mediterranean and a reinforced patrol over the Bay of Biscay, main hunting ground of submarine packs.

3. Provide a reguelling base on the southern shipping route to Britain and the Mediterranean, which hitherto has been little used because of its extreme danger.

Possibly enable fighter planes, and certainly bombers, to be flown directly across the Atlantic to Africa.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA and WEST VIRGINIA—Rather windy and somewhat warmer today.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Victory Garden Chart of Soil Requirements

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Soils are of various types, good, bad and indifferent. The ideal soil which all Victory gardeners desire is a fertile loam which is neither too light or too heavy.

Clay soils are usually stiff and heavy and difficult to work. They warm up slowly in the spring, taking a long time to dry out. Clay soils, as indicated by the accompanying Garden-Graph chart, can be made lighter and helped greatly by the addition of sand, lime, humus or other organic matter and coal ashes.

Sandy soil is very porous and allows the water to run through it too easily, and thus it dries out quickly. As the chart shows, sandy soil can be improved by adding stable manure, humus, cover crops and a certain amount of clay if it can be obtained. Plant food also needs to be added frequently, for in this type of soil it leaches away. A soil lacking humus is called a dead soil. Humus helps sandy soil by giving it body and by helping it to retain moisture. Humus helps a heavy soil by loosening it and admitting air, thus making it more friable and workable.

Good Golf Nerves

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Coach Howie Odell, of Yale's football team, was so nervous a few hours before a recent game that he decided to test his nerves by playing a round of golf. When he reached the course he learned a tournament was in progress. He entered it and led the field with a 71, one under par.

Finches are native everywhere in the world except Australia.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

BID OVER DOUBLE WEAK

THERE is seldom any need for you to stick in a bid, when the opponent at your right has made an informative or takout double, if you have a hand which is fairly strong in high cards. You can afford in that case to wait and then bid on the next round, or else, if you are extra strong, with nearly an opening bid's worth of high cards, you can redouble on that first turn. That enables you to use an immediate suit bid over the double as an indication of weakness and a desire to "save the bacon."

South's "business pass" produced 700 points for his side at Table 1, as West was set four tricks. He wanted to redouble, after South's pass, to beg East to take him in his longest suit, but so many people use that redouble now to indicate pleasure at the situation that he feared East would pass it. Apparently South at Table 2 had never learned you can make more points on the defense, sometimes, than by having your own side play the hand. His diamond bid was atrocious. His side made the No Trump game to which it pointed, but that was worth only 400 points.

East saved points for his side at Table 3 by bidding 2-Clubs immediately over the double, to advertise his abject weakness. With a hand of medium merit, he would have passed, and with a fair one, just under opening strength, would have redoubled. He could not very well be set more than a couple of tricks at his 2-Clubs, which was what South thought. South's bid, therefore, resulting in a No Trump game for his side, was the best he could do East was the hero, however, preventing a business or penalty pass by his weak bid.

Railroaders May Strike over Pay Raise Controversy

"Fair Treatment" Is Sought; Porch To Attend National Meeting

Unless railroad transportation workers get "fair treatment" in their wage increase controversy, there may be a strike of the industry's employees, Harry A. Porch, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, said last night after the committee had concluded its week-long conference here.

Porch will represent the brotherhood at the national meeting scheduled to convene October 22 in Chicago and has been instructed to "vigorously protest" any further delay in the wage rate increase for transportation employees of the nation's railroads.

Porch pointed out last night that "we have been negotiating almost a year" and that the men have "been patient." Employees, he said, "would have felt better" if the government's emergency board "had denied the request for an increase instead of giving four cents."

Held in Abeyance

Assurance was given, however, that all action would be held in abeyance until the Chicago conference has had time to bring results. "We don't want to tie up transportation," Porch said.

The national meeting in Chicago had been scheduled for a later date but was moved up as a direct result of the local meeting which publicly revealed for the first time the strong feeling of railroad workers against the increase of four cents an hour recommended by the emergency board on September 25. Such an increase is "an insult to a man's intelligence," Porch said.

In discussing the matter at the session yesterday, Porch pointed out that "the productivity of the employees is not now being recognized in dollars and cents with respect to income of the carriers."

Have Strong Case

The emergency board's report, Porch said, stated "that the employees involved in this dispute have made out a strong case for a wage increase to correct gross inequities and to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

Continuing, Porch said the "majority then recommended four cents an hour increase, but the minority member of the board pointed out that there was at least a sixteen percent inequality in the present wage structure, and that the recommended four percent increase would leave the employees utterly remediless if the legal conclusions of the board concerning the limitations of its powers should prove unfounded."

MERCANTILE BUREAU DECIDES AGAINST YULE DECORATIONS

There will be no Christmas decorations on Baltimore street and the downtown section this year because of the necessity of conserving electric current and materials, members of the Mercantile bureau of the chamber of commerce announced after a meeting yesterday.

At the meeting, a report was made on the sale of war bonds by the Mercantile bureau during the Third War Loan campaign and figures showed the $350,000 quota was exceeded by $26,000.

The bureau also decided to participate in the army air force quiz program on the radio and local merchants will donate prizes to be awarded local soldiers who take part. The program will originate at the various army air bases.

Mark Lazarus was named chairman of the bureau to succeed Harry Williams who held the position for the past two years. Benjamin M. Kamens was named vice chairman.

Members of the bureau also decided to keep their stores open on Armistice day.

Anne Frances Whiting Joins Women's Naval Reserve in Washington

Miss Anne Frances Whiting, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Brooke Whiting, 632 Washington street, was sworn in as a member of the Women's Naval Reserve by Lieut. (jg.) Leila Stevens at the WAVE recruiting office in Washington, D.C., yesterday.

Miss Whiting who is a graduate of Bryn Mawr School for Girls, Baltimore, and Bryn Mawr college, Bryn Mawr, Pa., expects to report within the next month to Smith college, Northampton, Mass., for an indoctrination course. Upon her graduation she will receive an ensign's commission and be assigned to specific duty.

A member of the Junior Volunteer Service Corps, Miss Whiting has also been a volunteer worker with the Allegany County League for Crippled Children. For the past year she has been employed on the staff of the Cumberland News.

Miss Whiting's brother, P. Brooke Whiting, II, is serving with the American Field Service in the North African war theater.

War Ration Book Four Stamps Will Be Used on Nov. 1

"Fair Treatment" Is Sought; Porch To Attend National Meeting

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Office of Price Administration today designated the green stamps of War Ration Book Four for purchase of canned fruits and vegetables starting November 1.

Scheduled for distribution in a schoolhouse registration the last two weeks of this month, the new book's A, B and C green stamps will be valid from November 1 through December 20.

During the first twenty days of this period the final series of blue stamps in book two—X, Y and Z—will also be good. These have been valid since October 1.

The new stamps will have the same point values as those of book two. They will be used for processed foods until early in 1944 when the introduction of the ration token system is planned.

Thereafter the blue and red stamps of book four will be used for processed foods and meat with the new tokens of the same colors given as change.

This will mean a transfer at that time from the brown stamps of book three to the red in book four for meat purchases. The balance of book three stamps will then be held in reserve, OPA said.

Other than the brown, the only stamp of book three assigned for use thus far is No. 1 on the "airplane" sheet, which will be valid for shoes beginning November 1.

Exact times and places of the registration for book four will be announced locally.

BUSINESS, PROFESSIONAL WOMEN HEAR TWO SUBJECTS DISCUSSED

Emphasizing the leadership of women in business and professions in solving the problems on the home front, Mrs. Olive Workman announced that the theme of the national Business and Professional Women's Club "Living on the Home Front" will be theme for the year.

This, she pointed out, is a challenge to the clubs to make living on the home front in the community more effective and productive of personal satisfaction and public good as well as more fruitful of aid to the great struggle in which the United States is engaged.

The local problem of the delinquent child was theme of a talk by James E. Spitznas, supervisor of high schools in Maryland and general chairman of the Allegany County Co-ordinating Council for Child Welfare. His subject was "Youth in the Community," and following his talk, he conducted a discussion period.

Dr. Emily Baker, principal of the training school at Frostburg State Teachers college, was accepted as a new member.

Among the guests were Miss Grace Alder, Baltimore, supervisor of high schools; and Miss Grace McKnight of Frostburg State Teachers college.

Friday Is Last Day for Mailing Overseas Boxes

Postmaster Issues Warning; Deadline for Navy Personnel Is Nov. 1

Even though Christmas packages for soldiers overseas were rolling in at an unprecedented rate, James C. Shriver, postmaster, yesterday warned all persons who desire to mail such packages to do so by Friday's deadline.

Employees reported the heaviest business of the mailing season for such packages yesterday when at least thirty-five bags of parcels were received. All packages were heavy, employees said, as persons wished to come as near the five pounds weight limit as possible.

Stand in Line

From 3 to 5 p. m., yesterday's rush period, employees processed nineteen bags of Christmas packages. At least sixteen persons were standing in line waiting to mail parcels from 5 to 5:30 p. m.

Monday's business was almost as great, with a total of twenty-five bags. Clerks were unable to sort and pack the packages in bags immediately and two large tables were piled high with the parcels waiting to be sorted.

Gifts to navy, coast guard and marine personnel overseas may be mailed without permission until November 1, Shriver said.

After the deadline of this Friday for army and November 1 for navy personnel, no Christmas packages can be accepted without a written request from the service man or woman, Shriver said.

Certification Hours Set

Shriver also announced that war bonds will be certified, at the local post office only during the hours of 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. Mrs. Mable B. Booth will be in charge of certification.

Since the post office is the only agency in town that certifies war bonds for redemption without charge, the work has become increasingly time consuming. On October 5, forty-two persons requested certification of seventy-nine bonds, while on October 6, the same number of persons wished to cash in 106 bonds.

County Official Recommends Study Of Postwar Works

Commissioner Wilkinson Suggests that County Needs Be Surveyed

Attention was drawn to the study of postwar problems to meet the needs of Allegany county in a recommendation presented to the board of commissioners by Commissioner Charles N. Wilkinson at their meeting yesterday.

Since various federal and state planning commissions are active in proposing plans for postwar work, Commissioner Wilkinson said, he deemed it wise for the board to begin a survey of county problems.

Commissioner Wilkinson proposed in the form of a motion that "the county commissioners set aside one day every two weeks for the purpose of hearing the needs of the various localities which are interested in obtaining water, sewage, roads and any other public improvement, and upon the accumulation of such data take the necessary steps to propose our plans to the federal and state commissions for approval and enactment into law."

During his term as sanitary inspector, Commissioner Wilkinson said that he had noted there is a great need for water and sewage in many of the towns and rural sections. "My attention was directed toward many unsanitary conditions throughout the county," he said, "and in many instances the conditions were deplorable due to lack of proper sewage facilities. Then, too, water requirements in many instances were inadequate and unsafe."

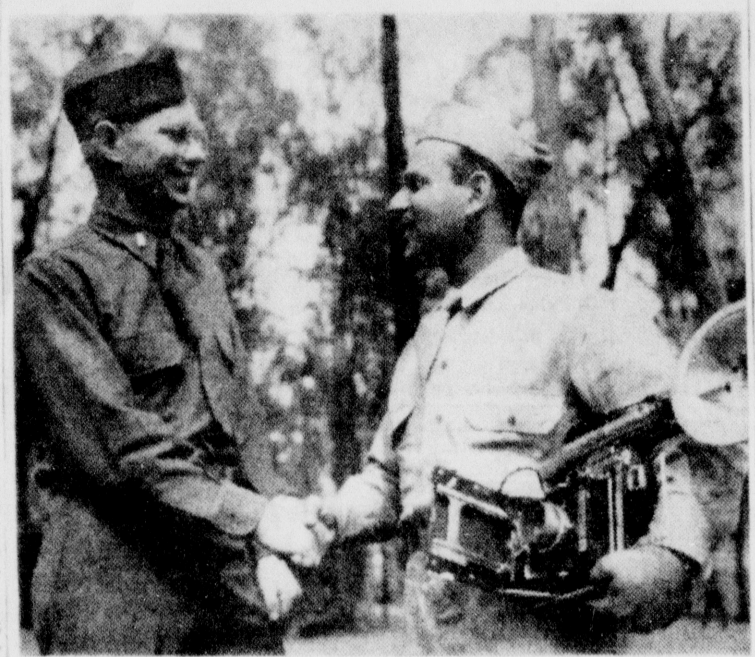

Wilkinson also stated that many of the roads were antiquated and called attention to the employment of readjustment that will be necessary after the war.

Besides accepting Commissioner Wilkinson's recommendations for record, the board of commissioners also received and approved the grand jury report.

Mrs. Barnhart, who resides at 163 Thomas street, also asks custody of the children. Edward J. Ryan is her attorney.

Rotarians Hear Plea for World Collaboration

Ralph Peacock, Washington, Pa., Urges Some Form of World State

Some form of world state and some yielding by the nations in order to make it workable will be necessary to insure a lasting peace when this war is over, according to Ralph W. Peacock, lawyer of Washington, Pa.

Just what form and how much must be co-operatively surrendered are not discernable at present, but the leaders of this and the other nations face the duty of determining both, Peacock said addressing Rotarians yesterday at their weekly luncheon at the Central Y. M. C. A.

Peacock is an active Rotarian and is past governor of Rotary district No. 176.

In pleading for world collaboration, Peacock made it plain that he was not advocating any particular form of world government nor world policing system but he warned that in making the peace this time the nations must get away from the old scheme of power politics.

History furnishes lessons to guide the peace making, it was asserted, notably the colonial union of American states, which had to surrender part of their sovereignty in order to form a more perfect union although it made one error that had had to be corrected by a bloody Civil war; and the Westphalia, Vienna and Versailles peace treaties.

Rotary can aid notably in perfecting a world peace scheme, Peacock said, because of its international scope, its individual leaderships and its friendly tolerance of all racial and national differences. Its members can aid, he suggested, by striving for a better understanding of other peoples, by refraining from hatreds and by seeking to be an understanding public.

The talk developed the theme of the Fourth Rotary object, namely, the promotion of international understanding, good will and peace. Thomas E. Gilchrist, attendance chairman, reported a 100 per cent attendance of members for last week.

Plans were furthered for attendance of members at the charter meeting of the Hancock Rotary club at 7 p. m., October 21 at the elementary school cafeteria there. Clarence Litzberg was appointed chairman of arrangements.

Cumberland Man Is Jailed in Baltimore Liquor Theft Case

John A. Gambino and Three Others Are Sentenced

John A. Gambino, 32, Cumberland was sentenced to two years in jail Monday, by Judge Eugene O'Dunne, Baltimore, on an attempted burglary charge following his arrest near a warehouse where liquor valued at $300,000 was stored.

Gambino, who has a police record here dating back to prohibition days, was one of four men sentenced in connection with the attempted robbery.

A cab driver in Baltimore, Gambino was arrested at pistol point as he descended a pole outside the building, the court was told.

Police learned in advance that the Dundalk Liquor Company's warehouse was to be robbed and watched the establishment for about two weeks before the burglary attempt was made on September 10.

Prosecutors told the court a long ladder was placed against the building and a second floor window was broken by one of the men. When police arrived the men were about to break through a brick-up window and pass cases of liquor into an adjoining garage.

Other men sentenced in the case are:

Mt. Savage Group Will Meet Every Wednesday in Community Building

A new Red Cross sewing class has been started at Mt. Savage, according to Mrs. Jim McQuown, production chairman, who visited the county community Friday with Mrs. Lee W. Witherup, president of the local Red Cross chapter.

The meeting to get the class started was held at the home of the Rev. Harris M. Waters with Miss Colette McNamee, branch chairman, in charge. Mrs. McQuown said the Mt. Savage group plans to meet each Wednesday in the community building there.

Sewing instruction will be in charge of Mrs. Ralph Wilson and Mrs. B. O. Coberly will teach knitting.

"We would like to have as many people in the group as possible," Mrs. McQuown said, urging that anyone who would like to join should contact either Miss McNamee or Mrs. Waters.

Anyone living near Mt. Savage is asked to take old blankets, pillows, lace curtains and similar materials to the home of Mrs. Waters for use of the sewing group.

FOREST CREWS HAVE FOUR CONTINUOUS DAYS OF FIRE FIGHTING

With a fifteen-acre fire at the Frostburg city dump which was caused by careless rubbish burning and a two acre forest blaze near Carlos, forest wardens and crews continued yesterday their fire fighting activity begun on Saturday, according to Umer G. Wigfield, district forest warden.

The Frostburg fire started about noon but was brought under control and extinguished about four and a half hours later. The same crews fought both that blaze and the one near Carlos.

Besides maintaining control of the remains of the Dan's mountain blaze which started Saturday afternoon, forest wardens and crews were called to extinguish three other woodland blazes Monday afternoon, Wigfield reported.

Assisted by the Baltimore Pike Volunteer Firemen, crews extinguished a blaze which destroyed about three acres on Shriver's hill off Bedford road. A like amount of forest land was destroyed at Woodland, near Midland, while four acres were burned near Finzel. Each of the fires required about three hours' fighting.

Wigfield stated that although the Dan's mountain blaze was brought under control Sunday afternoon, crews are still necessary for checks and mopping up. They were fortunate to have been able to maintain their control, he added.

Shriver's Hill Is Burned Again

East Side firemen were back on Shriver's hill yesterday for approximately five hours as three new conflagrations broke out in the wooded area that has been swept by fire for the past four days.

A considerable area was burned over Sunday when East Side was summoned four times and these fires were believed to be flare-ups of a four-hour blaze that burned over the hillside Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

First of the calls to the hill yesterday was at 2:50 p. m. and firemen were out for two hours and twenty-five minutes before returning to their station. Central firemen were called in to help put the blaze under control.

At 6:02 p. m. they were called back for another flare-up and this time were out for an hour and fifty-two minutes.

Most of the fires, firemen said last night, are in new spots and undoubtedly are set by children. Because almost every fire is in a new spot, they added, it is difficult to estimate how much land is burned over.
